BOOK RELEASE

Beyond the Observable Universe

"We are the universe contemplating itself."

Malden, MA, August 18, 2026— A contemplative new poetry collection, Beyond the Observable Universe by author Daniel Dischino, is now available for purchase on Amazon. In the new collection, Dischino turns his gaze both outward and inward, tracing the connections between cosmos and consciousness in verse that is by turns meditative, playful, and profound. Organized into thematic movements—Natural Science, Reflection, Time, Mind, and Tales—the collection moves from quiet observations of moonlight, birdsong, and morning walks to sweeping contemplations of eternity, mortality, and the search for meaning.

Along the way, readers will journey down a spiraling rainbow path of color and chakra, wrestle with the war between spirit and flesh, and descend into a modern reimagining of Dante's Inferno before climbing back toward the light. Whether pondering time as "a strange abstraction" or finding the sacred in fresh-cut grass and distant train whistles, Dischino writes with the wonder of a stargazer and the honesty of a man taking stock of his own life.

For readers of contemplative and philosophical poetry, Beyond the Observable Universe is an invitation to look up, look within, and discover that the two views are one and the same. The book's cover features original photography by Elizabeth Amigo Dischino and Daniel Dischino.

Daniel Dischino is a poet from Massachusetts. His first book, Conscious Energy, available on Amazon in most countries, gathers his earlier poetry into a philosophical and spiritual journey—one he himself has taken over the last fifty years, witnessing and experiencing this beautiful life. His hope is that readers will find a journey of their own, and that the poems will promote thought rather than relay ideas, because when we stop questioning, especially ourselves, we stop growing.

His work also appears in multiple Red Hibiscus anthologies and as the opening poem of the novel Immortal Magic by up-and-coming author LeeAnn Roberts. He has written lyrics for the Canadian band The Rachel Walker Trio and the Boston band Terminal 51, and he is featured regularly on podcasts hosted by the Late Night Poets group on allpoetry.com; recordings can be found at youtube.com/@latenightpoetsradio. Connect with him on Instagram @poetryandpercussion and on LinkedIn at linkedin.com/in/danieldischino.

Beyond the Observable Universe is his second book.
